

Public Practice Mentoring with Kate Jones Reiki Master

Are you thinking of moving into Public Practice of Reiki?

If you have come to a place in your Reiki practice where you want to make your living (or part of it) giving Reiki treatments, this will involve offering Reiki to people you don't know. You may feel uncertain about taking this step and will probably have a lot of questions. Your Reiki Master is the first person to talk to about these questions.

But if you are still in need of support, perhaps I can help, as a mentor. This means that I will help you to find the answers you need and to help you build your confidence as a practitioner.

This could include:

- Support in identifying where you are in your Reiki practice - whether you are ready for public practice
- Help to find resources to support you in your practice
- Support in dealing with your experiences with Reiki clients
- Help in setting your fees
- An understanding of the standards described in the NOS
- An understanding of the potential requirements of the registration process

I have been giving Reiki to the public since 1989. I am also a Reiki Master and make my living through Reiki. I have learned a lot in these 17 years and am keen to help other practitioners facing similar challenges. I have experience working both from home and in a formal clinic.

I have also been involved in the writing of the National Occupational Standards for Reiki, which give a good description of the basic skills a professional Reiki practitioner should have. I am also involved in the process towards creating a national register of Reiki practitioners.

I was trained as a mentor by The Reiki Association, of which I am a recognised practitioner. I am also a member of the Reiki Alliance. Mentoring can be done over the phone, face to face and by e-mail or a combination of these.

I charge £35 per hour. If you would like to talk to me about how I could help you, with no obligation, please phone me (Kate Jones) for a chat on 01584 890 284. I look forward to hearing from you.